

UPFRONT

W.T.F!

The maddest thing we've seen this week!

Sheep thrills!

You wool not believe what happened on this ski slope...

PHOTO: GUY LAWRENCE

This is the tale of a sheep that tried to climb Mount Hector in New Zealand, but whose baa-d technique led to it snowballing down the slopes.

Thankfully, pro skier Pete Oswald—who grew up on a sheep farm—was passing by and decided to offer the injured animal some assistance, carrying its 40kg frame as he descended the mountain.

"It certainly wouldn't have survived if I'd left it there," he said. "It was difficult to ski down while carrying it—there was a lot of wool in my face!"

Talk about stating the bleating obvious...

Get FACT!

Egyptians believed sheep were sacred. They even had them mummified when they died, just like humans

SEEN ANY MAD SH*T?

Send it to yoursnout@zootoday.com